

African Statistics Day 2012

CAPMAS celebrates tomorrow 20/11/2012 with "African Statistics Day" which celebrated on 18 of November every year in the African continent since 1993 in recognition of the importance of statistic & statistics in the nation's life and considerate it the essential base to support and development efforts in the continental countries.

The celebration came this year under the slogan "Equality and Men & Women statistics: enhance the statistics of social gender in development" as recognition to the continental interests in the social gender statistics and the importance of the woman as a basic partner in the development efforts.

CAPMAS regulates the celebration this year under the auspicious of Mr. Dr./ Hesham Kandil – Prime Ministry ... include two work sessions: First about Woman's conditions in Egypt and headed by Dr./ Merfet El. Telawy – president of The National Council of Women, Second about the statistical awareness and the latest initiatives within the frame work and it headed by Dr./ Ahmed Darwish – former Minister of Administrative Development.

Also, they celebrate the population clock tablet above CAPMAS building which monitors the population increase on the fly.

The celebration will be attended by concerned ministries, senior people in the government universities educational institutions and private sector...As well as representatives of concerned regional & international organizations.